The University of Arizona Alfie Norville Gem & Mineral Museum was originally founded in the early 1890's as a territorial museum to adequately represent ore & minerals of Arizona as well as illustrate the practical workings of the mines, mills, and furnaces.

Currently the museum is in the process of moving into the newly renovated historic Pima County Courthouse in downtown Tucson. The new museum will feature 3 main galleries and several changing showcases. The new location will also feature a community space that is available to the public for workshops, lectures, symposiums, and other educational events.

SOCIAL MEDIA

Facebook: gemandmineralmuseum.arizona/ Twitter: @UA_ANGMM
Instagram: @ua_angmm
Pinterest: UArizona Alfie Norville Gem & Mineral Museum
TESTIMONIALS

"This is an amazing collection, and we hope to give it an amazing home. From there, it will serve the public, the city and the mineral-lovers who visit Tucson from around the world." Joaquin Ruiz, Museum Executive Director, University of Arizona

"What a fitting opportunity to repurpose the most iconic building of Pima County Government and showcase how gems and minerals continue to define our city's future." Chuck Huckelberry, County Administrator

CONTACT

Eric Fritz - Museum Manager
Email: ericwfritz@arizona.edu
Phone: 520-621-3252

Selena Valencia - Assistant Manager
Email: selenavalencia@arizona.edu
Phone: 520-621-7320